What is www.wageindicator.org?

This domain is the emblem of a worldwide coalition of researchers, trade unionists and web journalists. It is also the international project website. We specialize in labour relations. We co-operate in national teams on a daily basis and meet internationally once a year. But we are always online.

The national teams create and support:

- national WageIndicator websites in 15 countries as per 2005, more to come
- free salary checks, answering your question: 'am I paid what I should get?'
- the online questionnaire, voluntarily completed by visitors of the websites
- marketing and promotion of the websites in order to attract many visitors
- datasets for labour market research and international wage comparisons
- coalitions of preferred partners, like trade unions, top research institutes, large media groups/publishing houses and the best job sites

The International Labour Organisation of the United Nations likes our project. It is especially keen on international wage comparisons. But it also sees potential for the WageIndicator as a research tool in poorer countries lacking labour market statistics.
