DECENT WORK CHECK ZIMBABWE 2025

WageIndicator Foundation - www.wageindicator.org

WageIndicator started in 2001 to contribute to a more transparent labour market for workers and employers by publishing easily accessible information on a website. It collects, compares and shares labour market information through online and face-to-face surveys and desk research. It publishes the collected information on national websites, thereby serving as an online library for wage information, labour law, and career advice, both for workers/employees and employers. The WageIndicator websites and related communication activities reach out to millions of people on a monthly basis. The WageIndicator concept is owned by the independent, non-profit WageIndicator Foundation, established in 2003. The Foundation has offices in Amsterdam (HQ), Ahmedabad, Bratislava, Buenos Aires, Cape Town, Islamabad and Venice.

Many people contributed to developing the Decent Work Check as a tool and to this document for Zimbabwe. Those who contributed to the development of the tool include Paulien Osse, Kea Tijdens, Dirk Dragstra, Leontine Bijleveld, Egidio G. Vaz Raposo and Lorena Ponce De Leon. Iftikhar Ahmad later expanded the work to new topics in 2012-13 and made the work more legally robust. Daniela Ceccon, Huub Bouma, and Gunjan Pandya have supported the work by bringing it online by building and operating labour law database and linking it to the WageIndicator websites. Special thanks are due to the WageIndicator global labour law office (headed by Iftikhar Ahmad), which has been working on Decent Work Checks since 2012. The Minimum Wages Database, developed by Kea Tijdens, is supported by Paulien Osse, Kim Chee Leong, and Martin Guzi. Khushi Mehta updated the Minimum Wages Database before 2020.

The Minimum Wages Database and Labour Law Database are maintained by the global labour law office of the WageIndicator Foundation, i.e., the Centre for Labour Research, Pakistan (Labour Law Research team), together with the country and regional teams. The Labour Law Research team is headed by Iftikhar Ahmad, Global Lead – Labour Law.

INTRODUCTION

Decent Work is the type of work to which all of us aspire. It is done under conditions where people are gainfully employed (and exist adequate income employment opportunities); the social protection system (labour protection and social security) is fully developed and accessible to all; social dialogue and tripartism are promoted and encouraged; and rights at work, as specified in ILO Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work and Core ILO Conventions, are practised, promoted and respected.

WageIndicator Foundation working since late 2007 to raise awareness of workplace rights through a unique tool, i.e., Decent Work Check. The Decent Work Check considers different work aspects deemed necessary in attaining "decent work". The work makes the abstract Conventions and legal texts tangible and measurable in practice.

The Decent Work Check employs a double comparison system. It first compares national laws with international labour and standards scores the national regulations (happy or sad face). If national regulations in a country are not consistent with ILO conventions, it receives a sad face, and its score decreases (and vice versa). It then allows workers to compare their onground situation with national regulations. Finally, workers can compare their personal score with the national score and see whether their working conditions are consistent with national and international labour standards. The Check is based on de jure labour provisions, as found in the labour legislation.

A Decent Work Check is beneficial both for employees and employers. It gives them knowledge, which is the first step towards any improvement. It informs employees of their workplace rights while enlightening employers about their obligations. Decent Work Check is also helpful for researchers, labour rights organisations conducting surveys on the situation of rights at work and the general public wanting to know more about the world of work. For example, WageIndicator teams worldwide have found out that workers, small employers and even labour inspectors are not, sometimes, fully aware of the labour law. When you are informed - being a worker, self-employed, employee, policymaker, or labour inspector - there is a greater possibility that you ask for your rights (as a worker), you comply with rules (as an employer), and you strive to enforce these (as a labour inspector).

The work is relevant to the challenges posed to the future of work, especially the effective enforcement of legislation in financially constrained states, a rise in precarious employment and analysis of the impact of regulatory regimes.

MAJOR LEGISLATION ON EMPLOYMENT AND LABOUR

01/13 WORK & WAGES

ILO Conventions

Minimum wage: Convention 131 (1970)

Regular pay & wage protection: Conventions 95 (1949) and 117(1962)

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Convention 95, 117 and 131.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The minimum wage must cover the living expenses of the employee and his/her family members. Moreover, it must relate reasonably to the general level of wages earned and the living standard of other social groups. Wages must be paid regularly on a daily, weekly, fortnightly or monthly basis.

Regulations on work and wages:

• Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Minimum Wage

In accordance with the Labour Act 1985, the Minister has the authority to specify the minimum wage and benefits for any class of employees in any undertaking or industry; require employers to grant or negotiate increments on annual income of such minimum amount or percentage as he/she may specify; and prohibit the payment of less than such specified minimum wage, benefits or increments to such class of employees.

The Minister may appoint advisory councils to investigate and make recommendations to him or her, in connection with wages, salaries or benefits, on the fixing of minimum wages and benefits for employees or any other matters that may relate to minimum wage notice.

Minimum wages are usually issued for industries not covered by the employment councils. Criteria for establishing minimum wage have not been determined by the Labour Act.

Compliance of minimum wage is ensured by the labour inspectorate. If an employee is earning less than minimum wages, he/she can complain to the Ministry of Labour Officials. A person who contravenes a notice issued by the Minister is liable to pay a fine not exceeding level seven and/or imprisonment for a period of two years.

Act 1985

Regular Pay

In accordance with the Labour Act 1985, wages should be paid at regular intervals on working days at or near the workplace directly to the employee unless stated otherwise. Remuneration payable in money should not be paid to an employee by way of promissory notes, vouchers, coupons, liquor etc.

Remuneration in kind cannot substitute entirely for remuneration in money. In-kind payment is allowed only in following conditions: if it is appropriate for the personal use and benefit of the employee and the employee's family; the value attributed to such payment is fair and reasonable; equipment or clothing required to protect the health and safety of the employee must not be computed as part of the remuneration of the employee; payment is not made in the form of liquor or drugs; and the remuneration in kind cannot substitute entirely for remuneration in cash.

Employer is, generally, not allowed to deduct wages except is certain cases provided by the law. The aggregate amount of permissible deductions that may be made from the remuneration of any employee in any pay interval may not exceed 25% of the employee's gross remuneration for that interval.

02/13 COMPENSATION

ILO Conventions

Compensation overtime: Convention 01 (1919)

Night work: Convention 171 (1990)

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Convention 01 and 171.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Working overtime is to be avoided. Whenever it is unavoidable, extra compensation is at stake - minimally the basic hourly wage plus all additional benefits you are entitled to. In accordance with ILO Convention 1, overtime pay rate should not be less than one and a quarter time (125%) the regular rate.

Night work means all work which is performed during a period of not less than seven (07) consecutive hours, including the interval from midnight to 5 a.m. A night worker is a worker whose work requires performance of a substantial number of hours of night work which exceeds a specified limit (at least 3 hours). Convention 171 requires that night workers be compensated with reduced working time or higher pay or similar benefits. Similar provisions fare found in the Night Work Recommendation No. 178 of 1990.

If a worker has to work on a national/religious holiday or a weekly rest day, he/she should be entitled to compensation. Not necessarily in the same week, provided that the right to a paid compensation is not.

If a worker has to work during the weekend, he/she should thereby acquire the right to a rest period of 24 uninterrupted hours instead. Not necessarily in the weekend, but at least in the course of the following week. Similarly, if a worker has to work on a public holiday, he/she must be given a compensatory holiday. A higher rate of pay for working on a public holiday or a weekly rest day does not take away the right to a holiday/ rest.

Regulations on compensation:

 Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Overtime Compensation

In accordance with the Labour Act, Minister for Labour may issue regulations regarding overtime, shift work and night work. Normal working hours for young workers and domestic workers are 6 hours and 9.5 hours per day respectively. Overtime may be regulated under Collective Bargaining Agreement. No such regulation could be located. The Normal working hours for adult workers are not clearly defined in the Labour Act.

Overtime rates are determined by the National Employment Councils through a Collective Bargaining Agreement. The minimum overtime rate is 150% of the normal wage rate when workers have to work beyond normal working hours, as determined by the National Employment Councils. The standards working hours are 8.5 hours a day and 44 hours a week.

Compensatory Holidays / Rest Days

There is no provision for compensatory holiday for workers working on a weekly rest day or public holiday.

Weekend / Public Holiday Work Compensation

Workers may be required to work on weekends or public holidays. There is a premium pay for working on Public Holidays (to be determined by a decree). When a worker performs work on Public Holidays, he receives wages at a premium rate of 200% of his current remuneration for that day. There is no provision in the law of wages at a premium rate on working on weekly rest days.

03/13 ANNUAL LEAVE & HOLIDAYS

ILO Conventions

Convention 132 (1970) on Holidays with Pay Convention Conventions 14 (1921), 47 (1935) and 106 (1957) for weekly rest days. In addition, for several industries, different Conventions apply.

Zimbabwe has ratified the Convention 14 only.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

An employee is entitled to at least 21 consecutive days of paid annual leave. National and religious holidays are not included. Collective agreements must provide at least one day of annual leave on full remuneration for every 17 days on which the employee worked or was entitled to be paid.

A worker should be entitled to paid leave during national and officially recognized public holidays.

Workers should enjoy a rest period of at least twenty-four consecutive hours in every 7-day period, i.e., a week.

Regulations on annual leave and holidays:

• Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Paid Vacation / Annual Leave

The Labour Act provides paid annual leave on completion of one year of service with an employer. An employee is entitled to vacation leave at the rate of one twelfth (30 calendar days; 22 working days) of his qualifying service in each year of employment, unless more favourable provisions are provided in employment contract or collective agreement.

Vacation leaves provided by the Labour Act are paid, no further specification related to pay level is provided by the law.

Annual leave is subject to a maximum accrual of ninety days' paid vacation leave only if an employee is granted a portion of the total vacation leave which may have accrued to him/her. The employee may be granted the remaining portion at a later date, together with any further vacation leave which may have accrued to him at that date, without forfeiting any such accrued leave.

All Saturdays, Sundays and public holidays falling within a period of vacation leave are counted as part of vacation leave. An employee who becomes ill or is injured during a period of vacation leave may cancel his vacation leaves and applies for sick leave. Where an employee has no vacation leave Accrued, he may be granted vacation leave without Pay.

Source: §14(A)(2) of the Labour Act 1985

Pay on Public Holidays

Workers are entitled to paid holidays during Festival (public and religious) holidays. Employee is paid his/her current remuneration for that day if it occurs on a day on which he/she would otherwise have been required to work.

Public Holidays in Zimbabwe are 11 in number. They include: New Year's Day (1 January), Good Friday, Easter Saturday, Easter Monday, Independence Day (18 April), Workers' Day (1 May), Africa Day (25 May), Heroes & Defence Forces Days (2nd week of August), Unity Day (22 December), Christmas Day (25 December), and Boxing Day (26 December).

Source: §14(C)(2) of the Labour Act 1985

Weekly Rest Days

Workers are entitled to 24 consecutive hours of rest per week. Weekly rest days can either be same every week or as agreed by employer and employee.

No provision could be located in law regarding rest breaks and daily rest period.

04/13 EMPLOYMENT SECURITY

ILO Conventions

Convention 158 (1982) on employment termination

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Convention 158.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

The questions under this section measure the security or even flexibility or precariousness of an employment relationship. Although these are not clearly mentioned in a single convention (severance pay and notice requirement are provided in the Termination of Employment Convention No. 158) however, the best practices in the field require that employees be provided with a written contract of employment; workers on fixed term contracts should not be hired for tasks of permanent nature; a reasonable probation period (ideally lower than or equal to 6 months) may be followed to assess the suitability of an employee; a period of notice must be specified in an employment contract before severing the employment relationship; and workers be paid severance allowance on termination of employment relationship.

A contract of employment may be oral or written however workers should be provided with a written statement of employment at the start of their employment.

Fixed Term Contract workers must not be hired for permanent tasks as it leads to precarious employment.

A reasonable probation period must be allowed to let a worker learn new skills. A newly hired employee may be fired during probation period without any negative consequences.

A reasonable notice period, depending on the length of service of an employee, may be required before an employer may sever the employment relationship.

Employers may be required to pay a severance allowance on termination of employment (due to redundancy or any other reason except for lack of capacity or misconduct).

Regulations on employment security:

 Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Written Employment Particulars

Every employer, upon engagement of an employee, should provide him, in writing, the terms and conditions showing name and address of the employer, contract duration, probation terms, terms of employment, employee's remuneration and its intervals, benefits provided in sickness or pregnancy, hours of work and other bonus and incentives.

The employment contract that does not specify its duration and or date of termination is a contract concluded for an indefinite period. The duration and the date of termination are provided in case of casual work or seasonal work or for the performance of specific service.

Source: §12(2) of the Labour Act 1985

Fixed Term Contracts

Zimbabwe's Labour Act does not allow hiring fixed term contract workers for tasks of permanent nature.

Source:

http://www.doingbusiness.org/data/exploretopics/labour-market-regulation#difficultyHiring

Probation Period

Labour Act specifies maximum probationary period (single, non-renewable probationary period) as:

• One day in the case of casual work or

- seasonal work; or
- Three months in any other case

Either party may terminate the employment contract by providing notice period of either one week in case of casual or seasonal work or two weeks in any other case.

Source: §12(5) of the Labour Act 1985

Notice Requirement

Either party can terminate a contract by serving a notice. The employer is not allowed to terminate the employee without just-cause. The employer must comply with the employment code or model code while terminating, otherwise the dismissal is considered unfair.

According to the Labour Act 1985, notice period depends on a period of contract as follows:

- 3 months in the case of a contract without limit of time or a contract for a period of two years or more;
- 2 months in the case of a contract for a period of one year or more but less than two years;
- 1 month in the case of a contract for a period of six months or more but less than one year;
- 2 weeks in the case of a contract for a period of three months or more but less than six months;
- 1 day in the case of a contract for a period of less than three months or in the case of casual work or seasonal work

During the probationary period, the notice for contract termination, given by either party, may be one week (in the case of causal or seasonal work) and two weeks

The text in this document was last updated in January 2025. For the most recent and updated text on Employment & Labour Legislation (for other types of employment).

Under a July 17 2015 Supreme Court ruling, employers now have the right to terminate an employment contract by just giving the employee a three month-notice period, without any retrenchment costs. This has led to a wave of dismissals. Zimbabwean Parliament is contemplating on making amendments in the Labour Act and requires employers to terminate a contract of employment on three grounds: for disciplinary reasons in terms of a code of conduct; if the employer and employee agree; or if the employee has been engaged on a fixed-term contract for a specified task. If none of these three reasons apply, the employer has to go through a formal retrenchment process.

Severance Pay

In accordance with the Labour Act, severance pay is available only for collective dismissals for economic reasons, i.e., retrenchment. Although Retrenchment Board fixed the severance pay differently depending on the ability of the organization to pay, the most usual is 03 months' pay for one year of service.

05/13 FAMILY RESPONSIBILITIES

ILO Conventions

Convention 156: Workers with Family Responsibilities Convention (1981) Recommendation 165: Workers with Family Responsibilities (1981)

Zimbabwe has not ratified both the Conventions 156 & 165.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

Paternity leave is for the new fathers around the time of childbirth and is usually of shorter duration.

Recommendation (No. 165) provides for parental leave as an option available to either parent to take long leave of absence (paid or unpaid) without resigning from work. Parental leave is usually taken once the maternity and paternity leave have been exhausted. For working parents, laws may define the portion of parental leave that has to be compulsorily taken by fathers or mothers.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance Recommendation 165 asks the employers to look into the measures for improving general working conditions through flexible work arrangements.

Regulations on family responsibilities:

• Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Paternity Leave

No specific paternity leave entitlements are found in the labour code. However, special leave entitlements as identified under section 14B may be used. Employees may request for up to 12 calendar days special leave for personal reasons that affect their immediate family (death of a spouse, parent, child, legal dependent or on any other justifiable compassionate ground).

Source: §14(B) of the Labour Act 1985

Parental Leave

No specific leave entitlements found in the law on parental leave.

Flexible Work Option for Parents / Work-Life Balance

No provisions could be located in the law supporting work-life balance for parents or workers with family responsibilities.

06/13 MATERNITY & WORK

ILO Conventions

An earlier Convention (103 from 1952) prescribed at least 12 weeks maternity leave, 6 weeks before and 6 weeks after birth. However, a later convention (No. 183 from year 2000) requires that maternity leave be at least 14 weeks of which a period of six weeks compulsory leave should be after childbirth.

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Convention 103 and 183.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Convention

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be entitled to medical and midwife care without any additional cost.

During pregnancy and while breastfeeding, a worker should be exempt from work that might bring harm to you or your baby.

The total maternity leave should last at least 14 weeks.

During maternity leave, a worker's income should amount to at least two thirds of your preceding salary.

During pregnancy and maternity leave, a worker should be protected from dismissal or any other discriminatory treatment.

Workers have the right to return to same or equivalent position after availing maternity leave.

After childbirth and on re-joining work, a worker must be allowed paid nursing breaks for breast-feeding the child.

Regulations on maternity and work:

 Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Free Medical Care

No statutory pregnancy related medical benefits are identified. A general health care program exists for low-paid workers to provide free primary health care. Rural areas are served by the Government and mission hospitals and urban areas are served by the government and private hospitals.

Source: ISSA Country Profile for Zimbabwe 2013

No Harmful Work

There is no provision in the law which prohibits employers from giving such work to pregnant workers which is harmful to their health.

Maternity Leave

Labour Relation Act provides maternity leave upon production of a medical certificate. Female employees are granted maternity leave for a period of 98 days on full pay. A female employee may proceed on maternity leave not earlier than the forty-fifth day and not later than the twenty-first day prior to the expected date of delivery.

Paid maternity leave is granted only once during any period of twenty-four months calculated from the day any previous maternity leave granted. Law also limits the number of times (to three only) when maternity leave can be availed by a worker while working with a specific employer.

Source: §18 of the Labour Act 1985

Income

Maternity leave is awarded with full pay to the woman worker who must have served an enterprise for at least 12 months prior to availing the maternity leave.

The employee is eligible for maternity benefits thrice with the same employer and only once during a 24-month period calculated from the day the previous maternity leave was approved.

Source: §18 of the Labour Act 1985; ISSA Country Profile Zimbabwe, 2017

Protection from Dismissals

There is no specific provision in the law granting a worker protection from dismissals. However, it is implied from section 18(7) that right of protection from dismissals is guaranteed under the law.

Source: §18(7) of the Labour Act 1985

Right to Return to Same Position

During the period when a female employee is on maternity leave, her normal benefits and entitlements, including her rights to seniority advancement and or the accumulation of pension rights, shall continue uninterrupted in the manner in which they would have continued had she not gone on such leave, and her period of service shall not be considered as having been interrupted, reduced or broken by the exercise of her right to maternity leave. This gives a woman worker the right to return to same position after availing her maternity leave.

Source: §18(7) of the Labour Act 1985

Breastfeeding

Female workers are entitled to paid nursing breaks (at least one hour or two 30-minute breaks) for the period during which she actually nurses her child or six months, whichever is the lesser. The breast-feeding/nursing breaks can be combined with the normal breaks an employee receives. However, the grant of such break is to be done without disrupting the normal production process in an enterprise.

07/13 HEALTH & SAFETY

ILO Conventions

Most ILO OSH Conventions deal with very specific Occupational Safety hazards, such as asbestos and chemicals.

Convention 155 (1981) is the relevant general convention here.

Labour Inspection Convention: 81 (1947)

Zimbabwe has ratified both the Conventions 81 and 155.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

The employer, in all fairness, should make sure that the work process is safe.

The employer should provide protective clothing and other necessary safety precautions for free.

Workers should receive training in all work-related safety and health aspects and must have been shown the emergency exits.

In order to ensure workplace safety and health, a central, independent and efficient labour inspection system should be present.

Regulations on health and safety:

- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015
- Factories and Works (General) Regulations, 1976 Statutory Instrument 263 of 1976

Employer Cares

Under Constitution, every employee is entitled to just, equitable and satisfactory conditions of work.

In accordance with the Labour Act, the employer cannot compel any employee to work under any conditions or situations which are below those prescribed by law or by the conventional practice of the occupation for the protection of such employee's health or safety.

It is a duty of an employer to ensure safety and health of workers by adopting measures and procedures required in the workplace.

Workers must also comply with the OSH related requirements and take reasonable steps to protect their own safety and health.

Free Protection

In accordance with the Factories and Works (General) Regulations, it is obligatory for an employer to supply, free of charge, and maintain in good condition, adequate protective clothing and appliances, as may be required by the inspector, including head-covering, gloves, leggings, foot-wear, eye-protection and protective ointments of a type approved by the inspector, to each employee who is exposed to wet or dusty, cold or hot conditions, or to any poisonous, corrosive or other dangerous substances.

The employer must also supply, free of charge, and maintain in good condition, suitable goggles or face-shields and respirators to all employees engaged in operations which expose them to glare, the danger of a foreign body entering the eye or any other dangerous substance liable to cause injury or disease.

In accordance with Statutory Instrument 68 of 1990, it is also the duty of the employer to ensure that equipment, protective devices, safety measures or health services as may be prescribed, are provided and maintained in good condition.

Source: §8 of Factories and Works (General) Regulations 1976; Third Schedule of the National Social Security Authority (Accident Prevention and Workers' Compensation Scheme) Notice, 1990 (S.I. 68 of 1990)

Training

An employer is required to provide written instructions on safety measures in a manner or language understood by the majority of workers. Similarly, it requires that workers should be provided with the safety training and get released to attend such training during working hours and at an employer's expense. It is obligatory for an employer to provide information, instruction and supervision to a worker to protect his/her health and safety. However, there is no clear provision in the law requiring employer to provide training periodically to new workers once they start working.

Source: Third Schedule of the National Social Security Authority (Accident Prevention and Workers' Compensation Scheme) Notice, 1990 (S.I. 68 of 1990)

Labour Inspection System

Inspections are carried out by the Labour Inspectorate from Ministry of Labour. The inspections are carried out in terms of Statutory Instrument 154 of 2003 and the Labour inspector will complete an inspection form which will be signed by both the Labour inspector and the employer representative. However, the labour inspection system is not in accordance with the provisions of C081.

The Factories and Works Act requires inspectors to ascertain whether the provisions of the Act are being complied with, to enter any factory or any premises where structural work is being performed or a lift or elevator is installed and make such examination and inquiry as necessary.

The legislation authorises inspectors to issue notices to a local authority where they find any act or default in relation to any drain, sanitary convenience, water supply, lighting, ventilation, nuisance or other matter in a factory which is liable to be dealt with by the local authority.

08/13 SICK LEAVE & EMPLOYMENT INJURY BENEFIT

ILO Conventions

Convention 102 (1952), Conventions 121 (1964) and 130 (1969) concerning Social Security, Employment Injury Benefits and Medical Care and Sickness Benefits

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Conventions 102, 121 & 130.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

A worker's rights to work and income should be protected when illness strikes. The national labour law may provide that sickness benefit may not be paid during the first 3 days of your absence. Minimally, a worker should be entitled to an income during first 6 months of illness. This income should be at least 45 per cent of the minimum wage. (Countries are free to opt for a system which guarantees 60 per cent of the last wages during the first 6 months of illness or even during the first year). A worker must be entitled to paid sick leave.

During illness, a worker should be entitled to medical care without any additional cost. Employees and their family members should have access to the necessary minimal medical care at an affordable cost.

During the first 6 months of illness, a worker should not be fired.

If a worker is disabled due to an occupational disease or accident, he/she must receive a higher benefit. In the case of temporary or total incapacity/disability, a worker may at least be provided 50% of his average wage while in the case of fatal injury, the survivors may be provided with 40% of the deceased worker's average wage in periodical payments.

Regulations on sick leave & Employment Injury Benefits:

- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015
- Accident Prevention and Workers' Compensation Scheme, 1990

Income

In accordance with the Labour Act 1985, if an employee is provided sick leave if sickness is preventing him/her from fulfilling the duties. A worker is entitled to sick leave for up to 6 months if he has a certificate from the qualified doctor. An employer may dismiss an employee if the employee is on sick leave for more than 6 months. Employer may provide paid sick leave during any one-year period of service as follows:

- 100% of wages during the first three months of sick leave;
- 50% of wages for further three months.

During sickness, an employee may avail accrued vacation leave instead of sick leave in half pay or without pay.

Source: §14 of the Labour Act 1985; ISSA Country Profile Zimbabwe, 2017

Medical Care

The scheme pays all medical expenses related to the injury at work. It also includes provision of transport and artificial appliances. However, the payment of expenses such as drugs, hospitalisation and surgical procedures are made using the ruling Association of Health Funders of Zimbabwe (AHFoZ) rates.

Job Security

Employment of a worker is secure during the period of sick leave, i.e., six months.

Disability / Work Injury Benefit

It covers persons employed in the private sector, local authorities, and parastatals. Work injuries are divided into four categories: (i) Temporary disability (ii) Partial disability (iii) Permanent disability (iv) fatal injury leading to death of a worker.

In the case of temporary disability, temporary disablement benefit at a rate of 100% of monthly covered earnings is paid for the first 30 days; thereafter, 51% of monthly earnings for total of 18 months.

A lump sum is paid if the insured has a partial degree of disability of 30% or less.

In the case of permanent incapacity/disability (over 30% disability), the insured worker's pension amount is 51% of the insured's monthly basic earnings multiplied by the assessed degree of disability. The minimum monthly disability pension is US$45.

In the case of death of a worker, 66.7% of the deceased's pension is paid to a dependent widow(er) or dependent's allowance is paid to dependent parents, brothers, and sisters for the death of an unmarried worker. Also, child's supplement (paid till a child reaches the age of 19 years) at the rate of 12.5% of the insured's pension is paid to the first child; 5% each to the second to the fifth child. Survivors' benefits also include funeral grant as determined by NSSA (min.

US$300). Survivors' pension ceases on remarriage (for a widow/widower) and a lump-sum of 24 months' pension is paid. (ref: www.nssa.org.zw)

09/13 SOCIAL SECURITY

ILO Conventions

Social Security (minimum standards): Convention 102 (1952). For several benefits somewhat, higher standards have been set in subsequent Conventions Employment Injury Benefits: Conventions 121 (1964), Invalidity, Old age and survivors' benefits: Convention 128(1967) Medical Care and Sickness Benefits: Convention 130 (1969) Unemployment Benefits: Convention 168 (1988).

Zimbabwe has not ratified the Conventions 102, 121, 128, 130 and 168.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

In the normal circumstances, the pensionable age may not be set higher than 65 years of age. If retirement age is fixed above 65 years, it should give "due regard to the working ability of elderly persons" and "demographic, economic and social criteria, which shall be demonstrated statistically". Pension can be set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

When the breadwinner has died, the spouse and children are entitled to a benefit, expressed as a percentage of the minimum wage, or a percentage of the earned wage. This must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

For a limited period of time, the unemployed has a right to unemployment benefit set as a percentage of the minimum wage or a percentage of the earned wage.

Invalidity benefit is provided when a protected person is unable to engage in a gainful employment, before standard retirement age, due to a non-occupational chronic condition resulting in disease, injury or disability. Invalidity Benefit must at least be 40% of the reference wage.

Regulations on social security:

Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Pension Rights

For full pension, a worker must have attained 60 years of age (same for men and women) with at least 120 months (10 years) of contributions. The required age in 55 in case of arduous work. There is also an option of deferred pension where pension can be deferred till the age of 65 years.

The old-age pension is 1.33% of monthly earnings in the month before retirement multiplied by the number of years of contributions up to 30 years plus 1% of monthly covered earnings multiplied by the number of years of contributions exceeding 30 years. The minimum monthly pension is US$60.

Dependents' / Survivors' Benefit

Pension Laws provide survivors' benefit to the dependents if the deceased received or was entitled to receive an old-age or disability pension. Eligible dependents include widow/widower, children younger than age 18 (age 25 if a student, no limit if permanently disabled), parents, and other dependents. If there is no widow(er), dependent children are paid through the legal guardian.

Survivors' benefit (for widow/widower and children) is 40% of the old age or disability pension a deceased worker received or was entitled to receive. If there are no surviving children, 12% of the deceased worker's pension is paid to the deceased worker's parents. If there is no surviving parent, 8% is paid to other eligible dependents. The minimum monthly survivor benefit is $30.

Unemployment Benefits

Unemployment benefits are not provided under the Labour Act 1985. A means-tested and non-contributory public assistance program is administered to provide financial help to the unemployed citizens.

Invalidity Benefits

Invalidity benefit is given in the case of nonoccupational accident/injury/disease resulting into permanent invalidity. In order to avail invalidity benefit, a worker must be younger than 60 years, must be assessed with a permanent incapacity for work and have at least one year of contributions. The pension is 1% of the average annual earnings an employee received before the disability began multiplied by the number of years of contributions up to 10 years.

With 10 or more years of contributions, the pension is 1.33% of the insured's monthly covered earnings in the month before the disability began multiplied by the number of years of contributions up to 30 years plus 1% of the monthly covered earnings multiplied by the number of years of contributions exceeding 30 years.

10/13 FAIR TREATMENT

ILO Conventions

Convention 111 (1958) lists the discrimination grounds which are forbidden.
Convention 100 (1952) is about Equal Remuneration for Work of Equal Value.
Convention 190 (2019) is about elimination of violence and harassment in the world of work.

Zimbabwe has ratified the Conventions 100 and 111.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, equal pay for men and women for work of equal value is a must, regardless of marital status. Pay inequality based on race, colour, sex, religion, political opinion, national extraction/place of birth or social origin is also forbidden. A transparent remuneration system and the clear matching of pay and position should be in place and to help prevent wage discrimination.

Convention No. 190 recognizes the right of everyone to a world of work free from violence and harassment. It defines violence and harassment as "a range of unacceptable behaviours and practices, or threats thereof, whether a single occurrence or repeated, that aim at, result in, or are likely to result in physical, psychological, sexual or economic harm, and includes gender-based violence and harassment". This definition covers physical abuse, verbal abuse, bullying and mobbing, sexual harassment, threats and stalking, among other things.

An employer can't discriminate against you on in any aspect of employment (appointment, promotion, training and transfer) on the basis of union membership or participation in union activities, filing of a complaint against an employer, race, colour, sex, marital status, family responsibilities, pregnancy, religion, political opinion, national extraction or social origin, temporary absence due to illness, age, trade union membership, disability/HIV-AIDS, or absence from work during maternity leave. (Conventions 111, 156, 158, 159 and 183)

People have the right to work and there can't be occupational segregation on the basis of gender.

Regulations on fair treatment:

- Constitution of Zimbabwe (Amendment) Act, 2013
- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Equal Pay

Labour Act prohibits discrimination in wages on the basis of sex. Labour Code also prohibits discrimination against a current or prospective employee on grounds of race, tribe, place of origin, political opinion, colour, creed, gender, pregnancy, HIV/AIDS status, any disability in relation to the determination or allocation of wages and salaries.

Constitution supports the principle of equal pay to male and female employees for work of equal value. Constitution also supports the right to equal pay for equal work.

Sexual Harassment

Labour Act prohibits sexual harassment at the workplace. Sexual harassment is considered one of the "unfair labour practices" and an employer can be held liable for civil remedies only. Labour Act strictly prohibits asking for sexual favours for the recruitment for employment; or the creation, classification or abolition of jobs or posts; or the improvement of the remuneration or other conditions of employment of the employee; or the choice of persons for jobs or posts, training, advancement, apprenticeships, transfer, promotion or retrenchment; or the provision of facilities related to or connected with employment; or any other matter related to employment.

No penalties have been specified for the perpetrators in the Labour Act.

Non-Discrimination

In accordance with the Constitution, there cannot be any discrimination on the ground of nationality, race, colour, tribe, place of birth, ethnic or social origin, language, class, religious belief, political affiliation, opinion, custom, culture, sex, gender, marital status, age, pregnancy, disability or economic/social status.

Labour Act 1985 requires that employers or other persons can't discriminate (in the employment related matters) on the following grounds: "Race, tribe, place of origin, political opinion, colour, creed, gender, pregnancy, HIV/AIDS status or on the basis of disability".

11/13 MINORS & YOUTH

ILO Conventions

Minimum Age: Convention 138 (1973)

Worst Forms of Child labour: Convention 182 (1999)

Zimbabwe has ratified the Conventions 138 and 182.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

At workplaces, children may not be forced to perform work that could harm their health and hampers their physical and mental development.

All children should be able to attend school. Once this is safeguarded, there is no objection against children performing light jobs between the ages of 12 and 14. The general minimum age is 15 years however developing countries may set this at 14 years. The minimum age for hazardous work, work that is likely to jeopardize the health, safety or morals of young persons, is 18 years. It can also be set at a lower level of 16 years under certain circumstances

Children should not be employed in a work that is likely to harm the health, safety or morals of children. It is considered one of the worst forms of child labour. The minimum age for such hazardous work is 18 years.

Regulations on minors and youth:

- Constitution of Zimbabwe (Amendment) Act, 2013
- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Minimum Age for Employment

Minimum age for apprenticeship and for other employment is 16 years. The Zimbabwean Government while ratifying convention 138 on minimum age in year 2000 specified the minimum age as 14 years.

Source: §11(1) of the Labour Act 1985; §3 of the Labour Amendment Act, 2015

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work, which is likely to jeopardise the child health, safety or morals, is set as 18 years. The constitution also requires the state to take appropriate legislative measures to protect children from exploitative labour practices and ensure that children are not engaged in work that is inappropriate to their age and places at risk their well-being, education, physical or mental health and spiritual, development. moral or social Constitution further states that every child below eighteen years of age has a right to be protected from economic and sexual exploitation, from child labour, from maltreatment, neglect or any form of abuse; and education, health care services, nutrition and shelter.

12/13 FORCED LABOUR

ILO Conventions

Forced labour: Conventions 29 (1930)

Abolition of Forced labour: Conventions 105 (1957)

Forced labour is the work one has to perform under threat of punishment: forfeit of wages, dismissal, harassment or violence, even corporal punishment. Forced labour means violation of human rights.

Zimbabwe has ratified both Conventions 29 & 105.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Except for certain cases, forced or compulsory labour (exacted under the threat of punishment and for which you may not have offered voluntarily) is prohibited.

Employers have to allow workers to look for work elsewhere. If a worker is looking for work elsewhere, he/she should not be shortened on wages or threatened with dismissal. (In the reverse cases, international law considers this as forced labour).

If the total working hours, inclusive of overtime exceed 56 hours per week, the worker is considered to be working under inhumane working conditions.

Regulations on forced labour:

- Constitution of Zimbabwe (Amendment) Act, 2013
- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Prohibition on Forced and Compulsory Labour

Forced/compulsory labour is prohibited and outlawed under the Constitution and Labour Act. In accordance with the Labour Amendment Act 2015, forced labour means any work or services which a person is required to perform against his or her will under the threat of some form of punishment.

If a person does not comply with the regulations provided by labour act, he/she is guilty of an offence and liable to a fine not exceeding level seven or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding two years or to both such fine and such imprisonment.

Trafficking in Persons Act provides for the prohibition, prevention and prosecution of the crime of trafficking in persons and the protection of victims of trafficking; and to establish an Anti-Trafficking Inter-Ministerial Committee and provide for its composition and functions.

13/13 TRADE UNION

ILO Conventions

Freedom of association and protection of the right to organize: Convention 87 (1948) Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining: Convention 98 (1949)

Zimbabwe has ratified both Conventions 87 & 98.

Summary of Provisions under ILO Conventions

Freedom of association means freedom to join a trade union. This is part of the fundamental human rights. Employees may not be put at a disadvantage when they are active in the trade union outside working hours. The list of exclusions for sectors of economic activity and workers in an organization should be short.

Trade unions are entitled to negotiate with employers on term of employment without hindrance. The freedom of a trade union to negotiate with employers to try and conclude collective agreements is protected. (The ILO has a special procedure for handling complaints from unions about violation of this principle).

Workers have the right to strike in order to defend their social and economic interests. It is incidental and corollary to the right to organize provided in ILO convention 87.

Regulations on trade unions:

- Constitution of Zimbabwe (Amendment) Act, 2013
- Labour Act 1985, last amended in 2015

Freedom to Join and Form a Union

The Constitution of Zimbabwe allows freedom of association to all, provided that no person may compel any other person to join an association or to attend a meeting or gathering. Except for those in security services, workers are allowed to form unions and to participate in the lawful activities of those unions and organisations.

In accordance with the Labour Act, any group of employees may form or join a trade union or employer's organization. Also, any group of trade unions or employers' organizations may form a federation. The trade union is any association or organization formed to represent or advance the interests of any employees or class thereof in respect of their employment.

The union, within six months on its formation, must adopt a written constitution and submit its two copies to the Minister. Any further amendments in constitution can be submitted within a month.

Union members apply for registration by submitting an application (prescribed form) for registration to the registrar along with a copy of constitution or operational rules. The registrar publishes a notice in the Gazette and within 30 days of publication, the union gets registered.

The employer can deduct union dues from the worker's wages and transfer it to the trade union.

Freedom of Collective Bargaining

The Constitution recognizes the right to collective bargaining for all the workers except those who belongs to security services. Right to collective bargaining by registered trade unions, employers and employers' organizations or federations is also recognized and regulated by Labour Ac 1985.

In accordance with the Labour Act, collective bargaining agreement (CBA) is an agreement negotiated in accordance with this Act which regulates the terms and conditions of employment of employees. A CBA usually provides better benefits to the worker than those provided in the law. If a CBA has provisions which are less favourable than those provided under the law, it cannot be enforced.

Parties negotiating for CBA must be represented by committees, delegates or agents. The negotiation must take place in good faith and they should disclose all the relevant information honestly.

The CBA is submitted to registrar for registration and then the Minister publishes it as a statutory agreement. A CBA becomes valid from the date of publication, unless otherwise stated in it. A copy of CBA is provided to each party and posted in a conspicuous place. A copy of CBA is also made available for examination, free of charge, on request.

CBA binds the parties to the agreement, including all the members of such parties, and all employers, contractors and their respective employees in the undertaking or industry to which the agreement relates; regardless of any change of employer or ownership or union members. The agreement is binding until it expires and get substituted by another agreement or it get terminated upon mutual agreement.

National Employment Councils (NECs), representative bodies of employer and employee organizations, consists of four structures: the Council, the Executive Committee, the Negotiating Committee, and the Local Joint Committee. Central to these structures are Designated Agents (DA) and Arbitrators who are responsible for resolving disputes in terms of the Labour Act. Thus, industry level bargaining takes place within the framework of the NEC. The NECs also negotiate the minimum wage for all industrial sectors through a bipartite agreement between employers and labour unions.

Tripartite Negotiating Forum Act, 2019 stipulates the establishment of the Tripartite Negotiating Forum (TNF), and to assign it functions related to cooperation, consultation and negotiation on economic and social issues by the government, organised labour and organised business, and to decide on relevant matters. The Forum shall comprise of 23 members; seven members each from the government, labour, and business as well as two observers. Following are the functions that shall be performed by the TNF: 1) Review and consult on various social and economic issues, and submit recommendations to the Cabinet; 2) when necessary, negotiate a social contract; 3) Contribute towards forming and implementing social and economic policies while promoting cooperation of the forum, and consulting other key stakeholders; 4) Monitoring and following-up the implementation of the agreements; 5) foster a shared socio-economic perspective; 6) and review and negotiate the labour laws in line with the Constitution of Zimbabwe and international standards.

Right to Strike

Right of collective job action in the form of a strike, boycott, lock-out, sit-in or sit-out, or other such concerted action is recognized and is regulated under the Constitution and Labour Act 1985. Although Labour Act maintains the list of essential services and no collective job action may be recommended or engaged in by the persons who are engaged in an essential service however, it requires employers not to punish the striking workers and prohibits hiring of replacement workers. Law restricts the exercise of this right in order to maintain essential services.

Peaceful strike is allowed only after all the methods of dispute resolution (negotiation, conciliation and arbitration) fail. Union members must inform the employer, relevant council and the opposition party in writing at least 14 days prior to proposed date of strike. Reason for the strike is also mentioned in the written notification.

Strike is considered illegal if it is not peaceful and does not comply with the provisions of Labour Act. A registered trade union or workers committee may authorises a picket, i.e., peacefully persuading other workers to participate in a strike.

Your personal score tells how much your employer lives up to national legal standards regarding work. To calculate your DecentWorkCheck, you must accumulate 1 point for each YES answer marked. Then compare it with the values in Table below:

Zimbabwe scored 40 times "YES" on 49 questions related to International Labour Standards

If your score is between 1 - 18

This score is unbelievable! Does your employer know we live in the 21st century? Ask for your rights. If there is a union active in your company or branch of industry, join it and appeal for help.

If your score is between 19 - 38

As you can see, there is ample room for improvement. But please don't tackle all these issues at once. Start where it hurts most. In the meantime, notify your union or WageIndicator about your situation, so they may help to improve it. When sending an email to us, please be specific about your complaint and if possible name your employer as well. Also, try and find out if your company officially adheres to a code known as Corporate Social Responsibility. If they do, they should live up to at least ILO standards. If they don't adhere to such a code yet, they should. Many companies do by now. You may bring this up.

If your score is between 39 - 49

You're pretty much out of the danger zone. Your employer adheres to most of the existing labour laws and regulations. But there is always room for improvement. So next time you talk to management about your work conditions, prepare well and consult this DecentWorkCheck as a checklist.
